Project: Software Performance Analysis.

Client	GEHC
Role	Software Engineer

Project : Review Comment Dashboard using C++ Programming in Linux OS (using GitLab):

The dashboard provided a centralized platform for managing and tracking code review comments during software development.

Implemented features such as adding comments, resolving comments, and tracking the status of each comment. Leveraged object-oriented programming principles to design and develop the system, enhancing code modularity and reusability.

Demonstrated proficiency in C++ programming, Linux environment, and GitLab for collaborative software development.

Project: Halsted matrix and cyclomatic complexity.

This was the mini project, it was assigned by client as a POC work.

- I worked on GUI by using C++ using MFC framework.
- In that GUI we have to select Gitlab repository and after we have to select file path for “.xlsx” file then It will read all file and folder’s from repository and then it will measuring the all complexity in excel file (like No of operand and operators, occurrence of operand and operator, program length, program vocabulary, program volume, program difficulty, program efforts, estimated bugs, Number of lines and cyclomatic complexity.
- It’s useful for develop and maintain the software programs.
